ABSTRACT

In our contemporary world to live without upgrading ones’ knowledge seems unacceptable for human society. Business world use business English as a means of communication. In our educational institution where Business English is a compulsory subject there are a lot of adult learners from all regions of the country, whose English level is poor. Basing on some peculiarities of adult learning, the author suggests the way of cultivating a new habit in learners that positively results in improving learners’ speaking proficiency. Findings presented in this paper indicate that a new method of sharing news at the beginning of the Business English lessons is beneficial for both the learners and the employers of organizations where our learners work.

Аннотация

В нашем современном мире жить, не совершенствуя свои знания, кажется неприемлемым для человеческого общества. Деловой мир использует деловой английский как средство общения. В нашем учебном заведении, где деловой английский является обязательным предметом, много взрослых слушателей со всех регионов страны, чей уровень владения английским языком оставляет желать лучшего. Основываясь на некоторых особенностях обучения взрослых, автор предлагает новый метод формирования у слушателей новой привычки, положительно влияющей на улучшение их разговорной речи. Выводы, представленные в этой статье, показывают, что новый метод обмена новостями в начале уроков делового английского полезен как для слушателей, так и для работодателей организаций, в которых работают наши выпускники.

Интервью

Республика Узбекистан быстро входит в международный рынок. Наша экономика требует специалистов с навыками и знаниями иностранного языка. В целях улучшения глобальной кооперации правительство ввел ряд государственных поощрений для тех сотрудников, которые получили нужные знания иностранных языков.

Наши выпускники программ по бизнесу и предпринимательству на Business English является обязательным. В бизнес-английском предмете изучаются терминология, а также учащиеся получают навыки разговорной речи. Важно также отметить, что это предмет помогает улучшить навыки работы с носителями языка, например, презентации, встречи и переговоры, которые называются навыками «мягкого» типа. Кроме того, Business English расширяет взгляды выпускников на их специальности, читая новости и ресурсы на иностранном языке.

Исследование касается взрослых учащихся в Business English классе. Существует множество способов обучения взрослых, но эта статья предлагает новый эффективный подход к развитию навыков разговорной речи у менеджеров трёх секторов экономики.

Важно отметить, что в нашей стране после окончания высшего образования люди не используют английский язык, если их рабочая среда и обязанности не требуют этого. Поэтому большинство работников сельских районов забывают или имеют пассивные знания иностранного языка, и некоторые из них имеют знания немецкого или французского языков. Чтобы создать подходящую атмосферу, можно вовлечь их в дружественную обстановку обсуждения текущих событий на английском языке.

Направленность является ещё одним эмоциональным фактором при изучении иностранного языка. Направленность - это ваше отношение и чувства к чему-то. Успешное приобретение иностранного языка, по крайней мере, в некотором смысле, зависит от учащихся’ мнений о процессе обучения.
environment, the learning situation, and how they view the target language and its speakers [11].

The research done by B. William Dharma Raja and K. Selvi shows that “...the students who never read the English newspaper perceived more problems in learning ESL than those who read occasionally, daily and frequently. Also, the students who read the newspaper occasionally and daily perceived more problems than the students who read the English newspaper frequently” [2]. The habit of reading news and share them with others intensifies the learning process.

According to Carol Taylor “Effective communication is one of the most important skills to learn to become a good manager. This is true in any language. You must learn how to settle conflicts, how to give encouraging feedback and how to motivate your team while also being sensitive to their problems. It’s very difficult to achieve all of this in a second language. You need to have complete command of English so you can be precise in your communication. It’s much easier to communicate effectively in English if you invest time in gaining fluency” [3]. Adult learners from various manufacturing companies, organizations and governmental institutions need the second language mainly to communicate with international partners, so the skills of speaking are very crucial. In fact, at our educational institution we facilitate companies’ employees, entrepreneurs and businessmen to upgrade their knowledge and skills. Learner-centered activities make it efficient for adult learners enter the new language environment. The solution to the effective developing of speaking skills to adults is working on news.

In general, the interest of the government in preparing qualified managers with knowledge of foreign language is pivotal. So, regular activity like sharing with news in the class promotes the acquiring managerial skills.

METHOD. Teaching language to adults

Continuous adult education is one of the key components of ensuring sustainable and effective development of human capital and socio-economic development of our Republic as a whole. As in the case with any other age group, teaching a foreign language to adults has its own specificity, with some attributes of older learners being facilitative of this task and others constituting a source of major difficulties [10].

Adult learning is known as andragogy was first introduced by American educator Malcolm Knowles. The resulting principles of a self-directed, experiential, problem-centered approach to learning have been hugely influential and are still the basis of the learning practices we use today. Understanding these principles is the cornerstone of increasing motivation and enabling adult learners to achieve [6].

What are the peculiarities of the adults learning languages?

A number of scholars dedicate their research works on teaching adults, among them M. Knowles who advocates that adults learn based on their (a) need to know; (b) self-concept; (c) experiences; (d) readiness to learn; (e) orientation to learning; and (f) motivation. The differences between children learning and adult learning are associated with adults having lived and experienced more than children [7].

According to Abela “adults are also motivated by extrinsic factors such as a job or a salary” [1].

According to Shamim Ali “Adult students are voluntary learners. They have certain expectations of achievement. The teacher of adults should fulfill their expectations and utilize their experiences, because adults can respond better if encouraged to draw on their personal knowledge. Sometimes adult students while learning English as a second language have several obstacles to overcome. Not only must they learn to communicate in a new language, but also they must adapt themselves to new Classroom culture” [12].

The authors of Current Issues In Adult Learning And Motivation 7th Adult Education Colloquium advocate “...when adults enter an institutionalized education programme, there is a distinct tendency for them to slip into the well-known pupil role where control and responsibility are left up to the teacher. This is the least demanding role to adopt, and often the teacher is also inclined to take on, and even insist upon, the traditional, controlling teacher role. It is only in the very few cases when the participants are brought to realize that they can take responsibility and use the teacher to support their own learning that the picture alters” [5].

Therefore, it is required to focus on those few cases which make it possible for the learners to take responsibility and let teacher support their learning. Mihaela Cozmaa in her work states that “the mature age students have more learning experience behind them, and this aspect can prove to be both beneficial and problematic. Thus, on the one hand, adult students have well-developed learning strategies that have served them well in other settings, and the teacher can help them use these strategies to their advantage in language learning, too. On the other hand, adults come to the English classroom with certain expectations about the learning process, and, in case these expectations are not met, the learners may become critical towards the new context of instruction” [10].

Knowles’s andragogical model is grounded in six adult learning principles (which he, good scientist, called assumptions):
1. The need to know Adults need to know why they need to learn something.
2. The learners’ self-concept Adult learners expect to be responsible for their own decisions.
3. The role of the learners’ experiences What adult learners know and have done already impacts how they learn.
4. Readiness to learn Adults become ready to learn when they need to know or do something in their life.
5. Orientation to learning Adult learners are life-centered (or task- or problem-centered) rather than subject-centered.
6. Motivation
   Internal motivators are more effective than external ones [4].

In presenting the method of sharing the news I made an attempt to follow the six adult learning principles. From my experience I can say that when using in class modern methods of teaching language like communicative or direct, there were learners who resist to accept new way of working in class. They prefer traditional method – reading the text in class and translating it. Nevertheless, adult learners always wait for something new from each lesson. But all of them suffer from procrastination, they don’t fully admit the responsibility of the personal development, neglecting the fulfilment of their home task. Hence leaving the main work for self-study and checking the results in class is what the method of sharing news suppose.

Verbal methods

Teaching methods are ways of joint activity of the teacher and students aimed at solving learning problems. In modern didactics, there are:
- verbal methods (the source is the oral or printed word);
• visual methods (the source of knowledge is observed objects, phenomena; visual aids); practical methods (students gain knowledge and develop skills and abilities by performing practical actions);
• methods of problem-based learning [14].

For our research we have chosen the verbal method which proves to improve the level of the learners’ communication skills.

Verbal methods occupy a leading place in the system of teaching methods. Verbal methods allow you to convey large amounts of information in the shortest possible time, pose problems for students and indicate ways to solve them. The word activates the imagination, memory, feelings of students. Verbal methods are divided into the following types: story, explanation, conversation, discussion, lecture, work with a book. To this list of the types we recommend to include sharing current news.

The task of each teacher is not only to give ready-made tasks, but also to teach students to get them on their own.

Choosing and applying teaching methods and techniques, the teacher seeks to find the most effective teaching methods that would provide high quality knowledge, development of mental and creative abilities, cognitive, and most importantly, independent activity of students [13].

As N.Y. Shepelyova states “…graduates of the master’s program … need a foreign language, first of all, for a deeper mastery of the specialty and for practical use in professional activities and everyday business and personal communication.

A small number of classroom hours allocated for the study of a foreign language in a non-linguistic magistracy increases the importance of independent work in the educational process…” [15].

For the learners of our graduate school with poor level of language knowledge practical classes are very important, so as the classroom hours are small. In order to make use of the class time, it is necessary to choose the effective method of teaching language. For this reason, I start the lessons with sharing the current news on different issues. This method let the teacher get involved most learners into the learning process and gives opportunity to speak ones’ own thoughts on a certain event. Moreover, learners are able to activate their passive vocabulary and improve language skills.

How to use a new method? Communication starts with exchanging information on the latest news. Having read the news in social media each student was to share it with groupmates. The Socratic method of questioning was explained to them and was made a center of attention while preparing the news. Hence who, what, where, why, when are the questions to which the students should have the answers in the information they bring in class. Also each presenter should express his/her own opinion on the delivered information and invite others to contribute in the learning process by expressing their own ideas.

The method of sharing news takes not much time (about 20-25min in the class a teacher can allot 2-3 minutes for each presenter), but in the process of developing the habit of preparing a couple of news, one local and one international news, students have to spend time on the self-study. And this is the key of the method. They have to present the news which answers to 5wh questions-who, what, where, when and why. When teacher gives assignment to bring news for the next lesson and checks them, students get used to be ready for each lesson.

Positive sides
While exercising this method a student has great opportunity to practice 4 language skills: search for some news (Reading), translate words and sentences, comprehend the information translated (Writing), present the news to groupmates (Speaking) and when listening to other news try to understand and give comments (Listening).

Shepelyova N.Y. in her work states that “Translation is regarded by many authorities as an important and necessary form of study. It is the basis of a consciously comparative approach to teaching foreign vocabulary and grammar and justifies the dosed use of the native language when learning a foreign language” [15].

While translating the material students encounter new words and expressions, so they naturally extend the vocabulary. And when presenting the news, they practice and memorize them better.

Teacher is always ready to correct student’s speech. Thus the students can rely on the support of the teacher and the groupmates. Little by little they accustomed to speak without shy and fear to make mistakes. By presenting the news to the audience the speaker learns how to deal with audience, correct the voice, intonation and stress, make use of posture and gestures.

When presenting interesting information to the audience and seeing that listeners are eager to absorb the news, the speaker develops the feeling of being important. This is a great thing when one raises personal self-esteem, feels as a necessary member of society.

As our learners are the specialists and work in the middle management they require to be good communicators not only in Language 1, but also in Language 2. So, being able to talk in English on different topics besides professional ones makes credit to him/her. Any manager stands from other employees with the following features like:

- be aware of current events;
- focus the attention on the important issues at work;
- communicate with employees or colleagues in a friendly way;
- have the feeling of time;
- be a model for a subordinates
- get the target

These features are exercised during the active involvement in the sharing with the news learning process.

RESULTS

I’ve achieved the positive results in teaching BE to adults with elementary level and let them improve their knowledge. Below I brought the findings that I got while having my investigation on introducing the method of sharing with the news.

Learners regularly brought in class a couple of news (local and world news). This way they improved their vocabulary and grammar knowledge, and practice their speaking skills. So, by the end of the term my learners had become more assured in themselves and willingly presented new information to the rest of the class. They also developed the habit of giving complete information by using 5wh questions, which does not leave a room for further questions.

The survey on the effectiveness of this method was held at the end of the semester in the focus group of 10 learners. It showed that all learners liked the idea to share the news with groupmates every lesson. The learners admit that their vocabulary had enriched greatly. Starting with sharing news is a good motivation for them as they wrote. Personally, I could state that they learned how to start conversation on the current events, at the beginning of each lesson willingly presented the most interesting and mutually beneficial news, and express own point of view.

This method proved to be the most effective in the elementary class for some reasons, the learners while using this method:
1. developed self-responsibility;
2. practiced language skills;
3. expanded vocabulary;
4. improved grammar and pronunciation;
5. overcome the fear of making mistakes;
6. developed skills of speaking to the audience;
7. obtained feeling of importance in the society;
8. expanded personal knowledge, so as to become a good communicator;
9. improved managerial skills

DISCUSSION
Electronic resources have enough works on using newspaper in class, but all of them describe the methods of teaching reading skills. For example, Lindsay Clandfield and Duncan Foord state that “There is also a lot of information in newspapers which make them an excellent springboard for lessons. So what do teachers do with newspapers? One of the problems with newspapers is that they are often used as an up-to-date coursebook activity. The teacher applies the same pedagogical principles and exercises that are in the coursebook. Two major problems tend to emerge from this approach:

It can be extremely time-consuming for teachers
It is not necessarily interesting for learners” [8]

The approach that I suggest, on the contrary, takes no time for a teacher to prepare. The focus is on the learner-centered activity, which intends to improve learner’s self-education habits and practicing in class. Learners search for interesting news, read them at home and prepare for telling them minding 5wh questions. The method sharing the news turned to be very effective in developing speaking skills. Learners on their own prepare news that they consider interesting for the rest of the class and self-educate themselves. These days we cannot do without social media, it means that all information we get from Instagram, Facebook, Telegram and other channels that provide latest news. Accepting information in the native language is natural, but to read it or retell it to someone in English is problematic for those whose language level is poor. Using these social media as a source the learners can achieve fantastic results in improving their knowledge of foreign language.

To control the fulfillment of the given assignments (in our case preparing some news) is critical for keeping the order in the classroom. Most adults procrastinate doing tasks in time, that is why a teacher should demand them to complete the assignment. By doing this the learners cultivate a habit of responsibility for their study and personal development.

Working with the adults requires more careful approach, each learner has high position at his company, so the teacher-learner relationship is important. Our learners’ age ranges from 28-47, and the most are shy or afraid of making mistakes. It is recommended to work in the atmosphere of trust and support from each participant. Each learner should feel his importance in class. Encouragement is non-the-less significant in teaching adults. Motivating them to learn, extend their horizons and become highly qualified specialists in the nearest future is the main task of a teacher. By stressing on achievements in better pronunciation, making a sentence with new words, making a 1-minute speech when presenting a news creates good spirit within the class. When a person feels support any fear to make mistake or procrastinating the fulfillment of tasks will fade away.

CONCLUSION

The Government’s position on adult training in foreign language shows the importance of language skills. Teachers always tend to find and implement the most effective teaching methods and contribute to the development of the educational system. The habit of reading news and share them with others intensifies the learning process. Findings presented in this paper indicate that the new method of sharing news at the beginning of the Business English lessons is beneficial for both the learners and the employers of organizations where our learners work. Regular preparation for delivering news develops in the adults a habit of searching for some new information and responsibility. Furthermore, being always aware of current events is crucial for governmental officials, managers, businessmen and entrepreneurs. Sharing the news will also make them a good companion and interesting leader.
